Apple Introduces Innovative Cellphone

By JOHN MARKOFF

Published: January 10, 2007

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9 — With characteristic showmanship, Steven P. Jobs introduced Apple's long-awaited entry into the cellphone world Tuesday, pronouncing it an achievement on a par with the Macintosh and the iPod.

The creation, the iPhone, priced at $499 or $599, will not be for everyone. It will be available with a single carrier, Cingular Wireless, at midyear. Its essential functions — music player, camera, Web browser and e-mail tool as well as phone — have become commonplace in hand-held devices.

The Snap logo is mounted on a light-colored stone wall. It features the word "snap" in a lowercase, sans-serif font. The letters are white with a blue shadow effect, giving them a three-dimensional appearance. A large, blue, curved swoosh element is positioned behind the letters, starting from the top of the 'n' and curving around to the right, ending under the 'p'.
